School Annual Plan

Provide a variety of activities and games;
improve children's problem-solving abilities

In the summary of the previous year, The school collected opinions from teachers and parents, Understand that the family patterns in schools are mostly working parents and only children, Many times parents choose to handle everything for their children first in their parenting style, Help children solve problems in life, Allow children to complete any activities and tasks to their satisfaction, Children lack the motivation to think and solve problems, Negative emotions and behaviours tend to occur when encountering difficulties in daily life, Affects future performance in getting along with others in group life.

In view of this, the focus of the school's annual plan this year is "providing diversified activities and games to enhance children's problem-solving abilities." To enable children to develop problem-solving abilities in school, our school has implemented the following plans:

Add picture books with life-like situations to the "Book World", Tell children of all levels weekly stories, through discussions during the process, For example: plot, results, improve children's multiple intelligence (problem-solving ability).

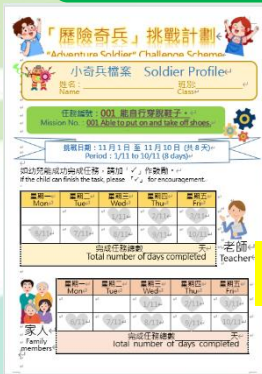

School Annual Plan

Social worker's words ~ Miss Zeng Minyu

Hello parents, It's great to be part of the school. I am Ms. Zeng Minyu, the school social worker! I am in school on Tuesday and Thursday (8:45 a.m.—5:33 p.m.). My services include individual services for students and parents, student groups, parent groups, lectures, and parent-child activities. Welcome, parents; you are welcome to come in person or call the school (2277 838383) to talk to me. I look forward to meeting you!

There are reasons why children lose their tempers. Children go through different stages of development as they grow. However, they have not yet fully mastered the language skills to express their emotions and needs, so they are prone to throwing tantrums and yelling to express frustration, dissatisfaction, or other needs.

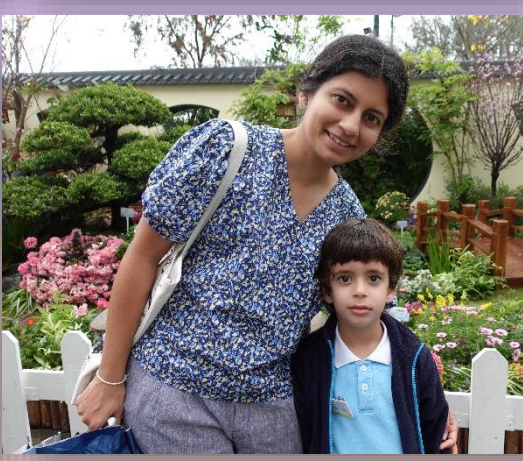

Understanding the impact of children's tantrums during their growth period. Children's emotional management abilities have not yet matured, and they may feel frustrated and anxious about small things; at this time, children lose their temper and yell to relieve their emotions. Children's self-control ability will gradually strengthen as they grow older. In order to understand and identify their own emotions, they will learn how to identify different emotions and how these affect them, thereby deepening their understanding of emotions.

How do you deal with children throwing tantrums while faced with children who often lose their temper? Parents should provide sufficient support and show companionship during the child's developmental stage. This will let the child know that their parents will always be by their side, giving them a sense of security and helping them grow up healthily.
